SMALL THINGS IN DRESS.

Finishings and Furnishings That Go To Make Harmony.

Special Correspondence of THE STAR. New York, Jan. 16 .- It seems to me that more and more attention is paid to the small things in the making up of all sorts of garments, particularly linings, facings, stiffenings and braid. Crinoline used to be the only stiff lining for the inside of skirts, while stiffened linen was used for facing. For binding or finishing off there was a flat mohair braid that scarcely paid for sewing on. Paper muslin and silesia were the standbys for skirt lining, and for waist lining there was drilling or any other old thing hardiest. Now there are immense places where the new skirt finishings and furnishings are made. It has not been considered too lowly to invent and manufacture linings for skirts almost too beautiful to be used merely for such purposes. The oriental silks have all the luster, sheen and feel of real silk and all the rustle, too, and there is no color produced in any of the dress materials that is not duplicated in these silk finished cotton linings. I have always wondered what gave them their crispness and sheen. I read the other day that the threads were treated to a bath of ground glass or silica, and that probably is the basis. But, whatever it is, the fact remains that the "oriental silks," "moire armures." "percalines" and a host of other things answering more or less well for the same purpose have been perfected for the needs of today. There are sateens so perfect, with a rich, fruity overbloom, that it is almost impossible to distinguish them from the real satin.

The number of different improved braids for the preservation of the edge of the skirt is large. Some show a round brush on the edge of a flat braid, and another has a regular brush on one side, and, in fact, I think, there are five or six different styles of this. These brush edge braids have almost entirely superseded the bias velveteens. They were better than the old braids, but left much to be desired. For rich and handsome silken gowns there is a quilled satin ribbon about an inch wide, and this is sewed on the underside, so that just the least little bit shows. Behind that is the balayeuse of lace or silk.

The skirt of today requires a lining of sirk or one of the oriental silks. These latter are by many times the most durable and are fully as pretty, so they rather have the preference, especially as they cost but a trifle in comparison. The lining is to extend all over the inside of the skirt. About 14 or 15 inches at the bottom is faced up with a haircloth facing. This, too, is a far different thing from the haircloth of a few years since. This is more than twice as light as the old and is flexible and springy, and as the hairs are woven crosswise they do not torment the wearer half to death. For all woolen dresses of whatever kind the horsehair is faced up about three inches in turn with the dress material.

Hooks and eyes have not been neglected, and there are more new kinds than I could tell, and there are patent buttons that can be snapped together like those on gloves, and they hold

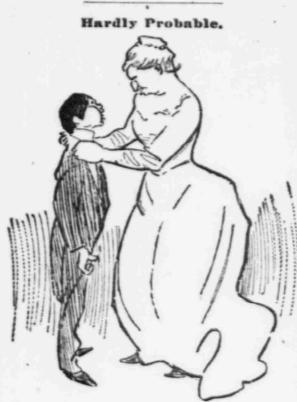

The linings now offered for waists are of cambric, firm and fine, black on one side and printed in figures in an entirely different color on the other. Some have a satin surface, and all are really artistic in design and finish. There is dainty narrow ribbon provided in all colors to bind all the raw edges of seams and stiff featherbone to strengthen the darts. This is made of quills ingeniously arranged to take the place of whalebone, as that is almost beyond the means of anybody with less than a million. It is in many ways preferable to the bone, as the dressmaker can sew right through this with a machine. Besides this, we find ribbon ease belts all arranged to sew into the lining to relieve the strain at the waist. Some of these have patented attach ments which hold the skirts up and the waists down. I have so far found all these a delusion and a snare.

f have used Ripans Tabules with so much satisfaction that I can cheerfully recommend them. Have been troubled for about three years with what I called bilious attacks coming on regularly once a week. Was told by different physicians that it was caused by bad teeth, of which I had several. I had the teeth extracted, but the attacks continued. I had seen advertisements of Ripans Tabules in all the papers but had no faith in them, but about six weeks since a friend insmall 5-cent boxes of the Tabules and have had no recurrence of the attacks. Have never given a testimonial for anything before, but the great amount of good which I believe has been done me by Ripans Tabules induces me to add mine to the many testimonials you doubtless have in your possession now.

I have been a great sufferer from constipation for over five years. Nothing gave me any relief. My feet and legs and abdomen were bloated so I could not wear shoes on my feet and only a loose dress. I saw Ripans Tabules advertised in our / paper, bought some and took them as directed. Have taken them about three weeks and there is such a change! I am not constipated any more and I owe it all to Ripans Tabules. Iam thirtyseven years old, have no occupation, only my He has had the dropsy and I am trying Ripans Tabules for him. Ripans Tabules nos only relieved but actually cured my youngster, the headaches have disappeared, bowels are in good condition and he never complains of his stomach. Gentlemen:-It is with diffidence that I write you, for I am not one who likes to find his ame in print, but I feel that in this it is my duty to those who suffer and my gratitude to you to write you what Hyler's Dyspepsia Tablets have done for me. Six months ago I gave up all hope of ever being well again. I suffered horribly from my stomach all the time: at times hardly able to get my breath. Had tried many phycians—some said dyspepsia, others eart trouble, others still catarrh of stomach-all dosed me but none gave relief. I don't know how many advertised medicines I took, but still no relief. A friend advised Hyler's Dyspepsia Tablets. Without hope I got them and began taking. To my surprise they gave immediate relief, and, after u4ing three boxes, I am now cured and feel better than I have in years. Enclosed find $2.00, for which send me two boxes; want one of them for my sister and the other, while I now don't need them, I will always keep them in my house. Yours gratefully,
